Key Findings

The global CRO industry valued $18bn in 2008, an increase of 14% over 2007. The CRO market will grow at an annual rate of 14% over the 2009–13 period.

Quintiles leads the global CRO market having accrued a market share of 16.9% in 2007, equivalent to sales of $2.7bn. There are over 1,100 players in the industry, and the top 10 players only accounted for 56.1% of the global market in 2007.

The fragmented structure of the CRO industry has led to an increase in strategic alliances, acquisitions, joint-ventures and other partnership deals as companies attempt to expand their service offerings and geographical presence.

Covance is the second largest global CRO, having registered revenues of $1.5bn 2007, representing a market share of 9.7%. Covance is building global capabilities, with many clinical trials now being conducted in emerging markets.

Biomarkers have the potential to become an integral part of clinical research, after the FDA recommended their usage throughout clinical trials to demonstrate desired clinical activity and safety.

“Business Insights estimates the global CRO market to be worth $18bn in 2008, and further growth is forecast at an annual rate of 14.0% to reach approximately $35bn in 2013. This growth is expected to be largely driven by cost containment pressures in the global pharmaceutical industry that have encouraged R&D outsourcing...”
Explore issues including...

Industrial consolidation. Globalization and the need to provide a wider breadth of services to meet customer needs across the drug development process is driving consolidation.

Budget pressures for biopharma. The economic slowdown has limited the availability of funds for ‘risky’ businesses such as biotechnology. This has led to many projects being suspended.

Consolidation in client industry. Consolidation in the pharma industry has led to the creation of larger entities with better bargaining power. This is beginning to impact upon contract payment terms.

Demand for CRO services. Regulatory pressures are creating a need for larger trials and increasing development timelines. Regulatory delays and phase IV monitoring requirements are also fuelling demand for CRO services.

Influx of private equity players. A number of factors are driving the participation of private equity players, including the nature of the service-based business model and recent shifts in the CRO industry led by globalization and the demand for full-service offerings.

Chapter 8: Parexel

Company overview
Parexel is engaged in clinical research, medical communications, consulting and informatics services. Its clinical research services (CRS) offerings constitute clinical trials and data management, biostatistics, clinical pharmacology and investigator site services. Parexel’s contract research services primarily focus on cardiology, oncology, infectious diseases and, CNS therapeutic areas. Parexel operates in 69 locations in 52 countries globally.

Recent financial performance
Parexel generated $1,163m in consolidated revenues for fiscal year ended June 2008, achieving a 26.7% growth over 2007. The contract research services (CRS) segment generated revenues worth $746m in 2008, up 35.9% over 2007. The growth in CRS revenue is attributable to the positive impact of acquisitions and increased demand for services across all phases of CRO business. Parexel’s CSR business registered a CAGR of 18.6% during 2004–08.

Performance by business segments
Parexel operates through three business segments: CRS, Parexel consulting and medical communications services (PCMS) and Perceptive. It generated 77.3% of its total service revenues from the CRS segment in 2008, up 74% on 2007. Parexel’s PCMS and Perceptive business segments contributed 13.5% and 9.2% respectively to the company’s total revenue.

Parexel is focusing on strengthening its presence in the emerging markets of the Asia-Pacific to tap into regional demand for contract research services and to take advantage of cost savings for its Western clients. In June 2007, it opened a new office in Hyderabad, India to provide clinical research and data management services. This office will help Parexel target Indian pharmaceutical and biotechnology firms. It also entered into a joint venture with Synchron Research Services and acquired a majority holding in Synchron’s Bangalore business in 2006. (Continued...)
